In economics, economic rent is any payment to an owner or factor of production in excess of the costs needed to bring that factor into production. In classical economics, economic rent is any payment made (including imputed value) or benefit received for non-produced inputs such as location and for assets formed by creating official privilege over natural opportunities (e.g., patents).

If the landlord wants to increase the rent during your tenancy agreement (sometimes called a "lease"), they must give you a proper notice and there are some limits as to when and how much the rent can be increased. The rent cannot be increased during a fixed-term tenancy agreement unless this is specified in writing in the agreement.
