Thermal spraying techniques are coating processes in which melted (or heated) materials are sprayed onto a surface. The "feedstock" (coating precursor) is heated by electrical (plasma or arc) or chemical means (combustion flame). Thermal spraying can provide thick coatings (approx. thickness range is 20 microns to several mm, depending on the process and feedstock), over a large area at high ...

2.3. Thermal and mechanical methods. In industrial practice, the Soxhlet analysis suffers not only from its long duration and the use of harmful solvents, but also from a non-absolute correlation between the amount of non-cured and hence leachable material and the actual in-use behaviour of the EVA encapsulants.
